terious power of second sight. "In Essex, England," says W. G. Black in his book on "Folk Medicine." "a child known familiarly as a 'left twin'-i. e., a child who has survived its fellow twin-is thought to have the power of curing the thrush by blowing three times into the patient's mouth if the patient is of the opposite sex." This is folklore, pure and simple. Another country notion generally held is that If twins are boy and girl the latter will never become a mother. The physiology of the subject is obscure. but there is probably ground for the belief. Another idea not infrequently met with is that the intelligence of twins is below the average. It is always difficult to prove a negative, but it is very doubtful whether facts sunport this notion of limited intelligence to any extent whatever. It is much more probable that their physical strength is likely to be something less than normal

What's In a Mame?

"Come here, Bates!" roared Dr. Big-wig, head and only master of the Cramton village school. "I have today received-ahem!-a letter from Mr. Johnson informing me that his son is unable to attend school in consequence of a thrashing you yesterday inflicted upon him. Is this a fact, Bates?" "N-n-no, sir!" qualled Bates, "I nev-er touch 'im."

But Dr. Bigwig did not believe, and wo minutes later Bates was asking for permission to stand up in class, the benches being of wood. On the following day Johnson re turned, and Dr. Bigwig sought justifi-cation of his act before the whole

"Did you tell your father that Bates thrashed you?" he asked, "No, sir," piped the youth.

The master's countenance clouded. "But your father wrote to me, sayng that Bates did it!" he thundered. "I know 'e did!" sniveled Johnson "It were Billy Beauchamp did it, sir, but father couldn't speel Beauchamp, so he wrote Bates."—London Answers.

His Desire to Reform.

Discussing poverty on one occasion, the Dutch poet and economist Van Eeden said, "We want reform, and we want it about as badly as a Dutch student I knew in my youth.

"This student's chum said to him: "Look here, I'm tired of the life I've been leading for the past two years. I'm going to reform. This mornng I shall attend a lecture."

"My student, a confirmed idler, yawned, put down his pipe and answered:
"Yes; it would be splendid to re form, and yet the beer is very good here this morning, isn't it? I tell you what we'll do. We'll let my dog Wilhelm decide whether we reform or not. "'Wilhelm decide! How will be do

"'Oh, it is very simple. We'll tell the waiter to bring a piece of sausage. We'll set the sausage before Wilhelm. and if he eats it we stay where we are. If he doesn't, we reform and go to ectures." -- Washington Star.

Landseer's Persistent Wooer.

Charles Landseer was a brother of Sir Edwin "and for some years," says the writer of "Leaves From a Life."
"was the victim of the most extraordinary persecution that I should think any man ever met with. An eccentric woman fell desperately in love with im and used to pester him the most extravagant love letters and then by lying in wait for him whenever he left the house. Finally she issued invitations to the wedding, prepared breakfast and an enormous cake and called for poor Mr. Landseer in a carriage and pair, the horses decked out with white satin streamers and she berself dressed most gorgeously as a bride. But that was the end of the persecution. Her friends took her away and Mr. Landseer remained a bachelo to the day of his death."

Forest of Strange Trees.

The most extraordinary forest in the vorid occupies a tableland some six miles in width between 300 and 400 feet above the sea near the west coas of Africa. The peculiarity of the trees of this forest is that, though their trunks are as much as four feet in diameter, they attain the height of only one foot. No tree bears more than two leaves, and these attain a length of six and a breadth of two feet. The flowers make gorgeous crimson clusters.
